

General Info

Objectives of the Course

To provide students with a fundamental understanding of the political, social, economic, and cultural structures of the Turks in the pre-Islamic period by examining the states they founded, their way of life, and elements of their civilization throughout history.

Course Contents

This course examines the period from the emergence of the Turks in history up to their adoption of Islam. Topics include the geography of Central Asia, the origin of the term "Turk," early Turkic states such as the Scythians, Huns, Göktürks, and Uighurs; and the political, social, economic, and cultural structures of these states. It also covers migrations, religious and belief systems, writing, art, law, and military organization as elements of early Turkish civilization. The course evaluates the role and influence of pre-Islamic Turkish societies in world history.
