Objectives of the Course

The aim of this course is to provide students with an understanding of the concept of civil society and the relationship between civil society organizations and social work. Students are expected to learn the historical development, functions, and contributions of civil society organizations to social policy; and to establish connections between social work practices and civil society within the framework of volunteerism, human rights, and social justice. Thus, students will be able to analyze the role of civil society in addressing social problems and gain the competence to collaborate with civil society as social workers.

Course Contents

This course provides a comprehensive introduction to the theoretical foundations, historical development, and functions of civil society. It examines different types of civil society organizations such as associations, foundations, and trade unions, and explores their roles in democracy, human rights, and social policy. The course also addresses international civil society organizations, the relationship between the European Union and civil society, and highlights the significance of volunteerism. Finally, it discusses the interaction between civil society and social work, emphasizing the contribution of civil society to addressing social problems.
